The prospects for a grand Democratic victory in Virginia on the 5th of November never looked brighter than at present. The Caucasian race in Virginia with an unanimity unparalleled in her history seems to be ready to join hands in burying forever from sight the rotten carcass of the thing known as Mahoneism. The regular Democratic ranks are in fighting trim, stragglers from the fold with Democratic antecedents and proclivities stand ready to fall into line and accessions to our ranks daily are reported from the Republican columns in every county in the State. It looks indeed, as if Mahone would find his Waterloo in this fight. One thing only seems necessary to insure the grandest Democratic victory ever achieved in the State—organization. Patriots in this fight are not confined to any class of our citizens and party lines to a great extent seem to have been effaced in the uprising against the great arch-traitor who would rule and ruin Virginia. But our forces must be made effective by organization and to that end work is necessary. Emissaries of Mahone, we are advised, are now visiting every hut and hovel in our Commonwealth, every kitchen is being ransacked for the halt and lame and blind, of that class of his followers who heretofore have never voted, and a premium, it is said, is being offered even for every one of that class of citizens who shall be hunted up and marched to the polls on election day to vote for Mahone. To such desperate straits even has Mahone been driven by the desertion from his ranks of white men who have heretofore acted with him, it is alleged, that he will attempt to offset the defection from his ranks by the colonization of illegal negro voters in the border counties of the State. The issue, indeed, seems to be no less than, shall white men or the black race led by Mahone, rule in Virginia and with such an issue shall we be less vigilant than Mahone and his followers? We believe we shall win the fight, but too much is at stake for us to neglect any of the means at our command to insure success. For that end, therefore, every Democrat should work and we must see that every freeman is registered and every Democratic vote is brought to the polls.

Democrats of Accomac, are you aroused to the importance of the fight now being made for the continued supremacy of the white race in Virginia? So far as we are advised the voters of Pongoteague District have only taken steps in that direction. As will be noted elsewhere, there, clubs are being organized and the machinery is being put in motion, looking to the accomplishment of the end desired. To them, Democrats of Accomac your attention is invited. Bonfires, illuminations, torchlight processions, public speakings "do not fill the bill" in the present canvass. They are aids to our success, but they are not all of it—work, unceasing work is necessary in the cause for which we fight and with such an enemy as Mahone confronting us. To the end, therefore, that success may crown our efforts let clubs be organized in every neighborhood of our county and let every member be constituted a committee to look after every Democrat who is not registered, and every Democrat who has qualified him self as a voter, for the purpose of bringing him to the club and seeing that he is promptly at the polls on election day.

Extracts from the first speech of Mahone in the present canvass, full of demagoguism and misrepresentations, appear in another column. No strong points were made in the speech and no enthusiasm was aroused by its utterance. Brass bands, glaring placards announcing his presence and curiosity to hear what the great arch-traitor had to say failed to attract any considerable crowd around him on the occasion. He read his little speech and no one seems to have been particularly impressed with the matter or delivery.

In the present fight in which we are engaged in Virginia, it is folly to say that a third party has a chance for success. The head of the Prohibition ticket certainly has not been deluded into the belief that he had any prospect of being the next Governor of Virginia. No one believes truly that the legislative candidates of the Prohibition party in Accomac can be elected by white votes. The propositions submitted are self evident, and so plain that "a wayfaring man, though a fool" need not err therein. If the propositions submitted then are true, either the Democratic party must be triumphant or Mahone will be our next Governor. If our conclusions are correct, it is not true, also, that a Democrat who votes the Prohibition ticket, is an aider and abettor in the election of Mahone, the greatest enemy Virginia ever had? These thoughts submitted, as food for reflection, for our Prohibition Democratic brethren will be elaborated in the future, when the necessity for the same arises.

GEN. MAHONE'S OPENING SPEECH

He favors a Free Ballot and Protection—A Splendid Democratic Rally—Daniel Pours Hot Shot into Mahone.

ABINGDON, VA., Sept. 23.—Gen. Mahone, the Republican candidate for Governor of Virginia, opened his campaign here today with a very large and successful meeting, in S. F. Hart's tobacco warehouse. Of course Gen. Mahone was the lion of the hour in the Southwest, but he was not permitted to carry off the lion's share of popularity. Senator Daniel's flaming oratory and Mr. Barton's spell binding eloquence and the solid shots of R. Taylor Scott were counteracting influences. The Republican meeting was held at noon, and the Democrats calculating that after Mahone had spoken public curiosity would be satisfied, arranged for their meeting in the afternoon, although they afterwards went on simultaneously. There was great desire on the part of many people to have a joint discussion, and Senator Daniel was ready for it, though no public speaker is anxious to undergo such an ordeal. Gen. Mahone said some of the crowd wanted joint debates just as some people would want to see a dog-fight. They regarded it as a contest in which men would pull each other to pieces, not discuss principles seriously or leave lasting impressions. So the excitement of seeing speakers of opposite sides on the same platform, firing shot into each other, was denied to the crowds which congregated in Abingdon today.

JOINT DISCUSSION DECLINED. The local Democratic managers were urgent for a joint discussion, and sent a formal letter proposing that Senator Daniel, Mr. Scott and other speakers now in town on that side should engage Mahone and his staff in debate, in deference to widely expressed popular wishes and expectations. To this Judge Wood wrote for Mr. Somers, the local Republican chairman, a diplomatic reply, which was evasive as a judicial opinion. He stated that Mahone was present as the nominee and candidate of the Republican party for Governor, and is willing to meet P. W. McKinney the Democratic candidate, today or hereafter, at any of his appointed places for speaking. Judge Wood added that there were other Republican speakers here willing to meet any of the Democratic speakers at this time or hereafter. The intention of this reply was to stave off the issue, as the writer very well knew Mr. McKinney was not in town.

A GOOD HUMORED CROWD. Throughout the forenoon all the roads leading into town were thronged with horsemen, and the streets were soon full of cavalry. Good humor and good order prevailed everywhere. Two brass bands served out music from the corners, or serenaded the lions of the occasion. The warehouse where the Republicans met would hold 2,500 people, but there was not more than seven or eight hundred men assembled, and before Gen. Mahone got through speaking there were not more than three hundred on the temporary benches.

THE BALL OPENED. Mr. John C. Somers opened the ball in a brief speech, in which he said the issue of the campaign was whether Virginia should throw off the Bourbon yoke and emerge out of the rust of the past into the industrial progress and development which the present invites. The introductory was a very warm eulogy of the candidate for Governor, and was warmly applauded.

Gen. Mahone was, of course, received with great cheering. He said that, proud as he was of being a Virginian, he was prouder still of being an American citizen. It is no cause of estrangement or prejudice with me of my neighbor that he entertains different views from mine on any political question. It is our right to differ. No man, poor or rich, is without concern or responsibility for the character of the government which is to make the laws and administer the affairs of organized society. One of the responsibilities resting upon the citizen is the exercise of the elective franchise in November next.

All I ask is that the voters shall be animated by the lofty consideration of public policy which shall be redoubled to the peace and prosperity and happiness of this people. Above all let us demand there shall be honest methods at the polls and teach the lesson that it is as great a crime to stuff a ballot-box as to pick the pocket of a neighbor.

He denounced the theory that the means could be justified by the ends. Nothing is so threatening to our civilization as the damnable theory. Last year, he said, my competitor for Governor threatened the kiltax. At Lynchburg Senator Daniel, advancing to the stage with each of his hands in the hand of a colored man, said "the country is safe when the two races are thus linked by representative men." Where was, then, this pretended apprehension for the safety of our civilization? There was no fear of it when they contemplated making a judge of a colored man. No, it is all a scarecrow and pandering to prejudice and playing on fears.

Gen. Mahone dwelt at length on the cry which had been raised of negro domination, but said it was not the ghost of the colored man in politics he was discussing. He said there was no reality in it. The negro is here to stay. He is essential to our labor system. He is the life-giving power to all our industries and pursuits. His labor contributes to the wealth and power of this Commonwealth, and the more you contribute to his enlightenment the more you enlarge our prosperity. We want no condition of serfdom, if you would preserve the liberty of this people and advance their prosperity.

The interests of this people and of a majority of the white men are for protection. The negro is naturally a Republican and instinctively a protectionist, and every man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow is or ought to be a protectionist. If you are in favor of protection, of that economic policy which proposes to keep the result of your labors here at home among your own people, it is your duty and interest to vote for the candidates who stand for the things you want rather than those who have always promoted free trade.

If you favor the Blair educational bill of bringing into Virginia five millions of money it would bring into our State, then vote for the people who you know are earnest in this matter. If you favor the repeal of the internal revenue system and that onerous tax, then vote for the candidates who are honest and earnest in this matter, and not for those who have avoided and shirked doing so. What candidate of the Democratic party now before you can point to his record in favor of those matters?

Gen. Mahone spoke of Cleveland as a bigger man than his party, because he had convictions. Cleveland was in favor of free trade and the repeal of the import tax and opposed to the Blair bill. Where does the Democratic party stand? They who tell you these things have no part in this campaign. Protection, however, is essential to our own home development and to enlarge the prosperity of the people, and it is the policy of the Republican party to promote these things.

A large part of Gen. Mahone's speech was devoted to the advocacy of the protective policy. He said it was the right policy to pursue which promotes the spending of the earnings of industry within the limits of our own country, and not opening the doors to an influx of pauper labor from Europe, such as the Democratic free-trade policy invites. He thanked God there was no longer any slavery in this country, and claimed that under Republican protective policy our exports had exceeded the imports and benefited the industry of the country immeasurably. His speech throughout was protective argument, and he said there was no question of fundamental importance for consideration. He pitched into McKinney for not speaking of the internal revenue tax and arraigned him for it.

In concluding he referred to the unsettled state of the public debt, which discredits not only the honesty of the Commonwealth, but excites just suspicion against the honesty of every individual man in the State. Its condition is confusion worse confounded by the treatment of the Democratic party. "We Readjusters believed," said Gen. Mahone, "we had formulated an honorable basis of settlement, and the Democrats to get power accepted it and said 'no power.' What have they done with it? They have amended the settlement out of life. They have completely emasculated it. All the vital energies of the proposition are gone by the treatment it has received from the Democratic management, and their position is one of repudiation, not declared, but they don't mean to pay a cent. Your debt has gone on increasing at the rate of a million a year for the five years they have been in power. They refuse to pay, and hamper the case by vexatious legislation and suits. I never believed the people wanted any settlement which would not look to the payment of every dollar of our equitable share of the debt of the individual State, carrying a rate of interest we can bear without burthening the taxpayers of the State. To this extent I am a debtor." He said there was no intention on the part of the Democratic party to make a settlement when they were invited to the second conference. The English proposition could have been accepted under our original Readjuster settlement. That is all gone, however, but I say the settlement can be effected on that basis, and, if elected, we will make it on that basis without adding a stiver to the original amount, and if we don't do it we will resign. Gen. Mahone claimed that the Readjuster party had provided public schools and inaugurated measures looking to the education of the children of the State.

THE DEMOCRATIC MEETING. The Democratic speaking was in the Town Hall, which will hold eight hundred people, and was packed while many were on the outside unable to hear, and the street was picketed with horses. Hon. Connelly F. Trigg introduced the speakers, Mr. R. Taylor Scott, of Fauquier, candidate for attorney-general, having the right of way. He made an excellent impression and a sound speech touching on State issues and the corruptive tendencies of Mahone methods.

DANIEL ON MAHONE. To close the meeting came Senator Daniel, who stripped Gen. Mahone, holding him up in six public characters, in every one of which, the Senator said, he had proved false, viz: As a Confederate soldier, when he voted against removing a comrade's disabilities; as a railroad president, in which he had wrecked the roads and the State's interest in them as a Democratic leader, when he sold out to Simon Cameron for boudoir; as a Readjuster, when he did not raise a finger against federal violence; as a friend of the workingman, when he employed scab printers on the Richmond Whig and imported English engineers to run Virginia railroads, and now as a Republican, when he is trying to fool the old issue Republicans. Senator Daniel said there is no Republicanism in it. The essence of the contest is Mahoneism, and he is using the tariff as a certain before the stage to keep the people from seeing what is going on in the green-room behind. No tariff is involved in this State contest, and we have no State issues except Mahone, who wants to be Governor, but won't get there. Senator Daniel, who is a brilliant and beautiful speaker, held the crowd together late in the afternoon after two other set speeches had been made, and no greater evidence of his power on the stump could be given than this single fact. In the Democratic meeting there were some ladies, who occupied seats in the gallery. No negroes were present, and the assemblage fully represented the intelligence of the section.—Balto. Sun.

Mr. Massey and the Colored Schools.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA., Sept. 22.—The Hon. John E. Massey was in the city yesterday. He goes tomorrow to Patrick county, where he speaks on Tuesday. He has mapped out a plan of fight for himself, a part of which is a very positive stand on the question of free schools for the colored children. He says that for years the white people of the State have contributed six-sevenths of the money necessary to carry on the colored schools, while the colored voters have been unwavering in their political antagonism of the whites. This enormous sum ($340,000) annually paid by the white taxpayers to the education of colored children, added to the amount now expended on the white schools, would insure more white schools and longer sessions. He would give to the colored schools, if the negroes persist in solid opposition, the money paid into the treasury by colored taxpayers—some $60,000 annually, or about one-seventh of what is needed to keep those schools at their present standard.—Balto. Sun.

The five judges who compose the Court of Appeals of Virginia—all Republicans, elected by Mahone's Legislature—are said to be, with a single exception, opposed to the loss. The clerk of the court, Col. W. C. Pendleton, and the reporter, Col. G. W. Bamsbrogh, are also out-spoken in their opposition to him. Mahone claimed at one time, not very remote, to be a better Democrat than Ben Hill. Has he, in the short time that has intervened since that memorable day in the United States Senate, become a better Republican than the judges, the clerk, and the reporter of the Supreme Court of Virginia? Let Republicans answer at the polls.—Montgomery Messenger.

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

OF NEW YORK.

W. A. BREWER, JR., President.

Reasons why you should insure in the WASHINGTON LIFE INS. CO. Because the WASHINGTON is thirty years old and its reliability is unquestioned.

Because it has ample assets to meet its losses and a large surplus besides.

Because The Washington is the only company that declares annually a Non-forfeitable dividend, and no policy can lapse so long as there is any dividends remaining to its credit.

Because all policies are irrevocable and Non-forfeitable, and all losses are payable immediately upon receipt of proper proofs of death; which makes its contract the Perfection of Life Insurance.

The WASHINGTON has $10,000,000 assets, and has stood the test of time and all the great financial panics since 1869, and after

Paying over $17,000,000 in Death Losses and matured endowments is stronger today than ever before.

The following illustrations will show the working of an ordinary life policy in The WASHINGTON:

A gentleman of New York City insured in THE WASHINGTON LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY of New York for $10,000, paid in premiums up to 1884, $4,468.80. The value of this policy to-day as a death claim is 1232 per cent. upon the net investment! The amount that would be paid under the policy is $13,057.40.

ANOTHER FACT.—By the Non-Forfeitable Dividend System of THE WASHINGTON, applied to this policy, it would be kept in force 10 years, even if the premiums should not be paid! In case of death the policy would be paid with the remaining dividends.

STILL ANOTHER.—The average cost of this policy per annum, for 24 years, is $3.38 for each $1,000.

ONCE MORE.—The result of this policy, as a claim—after 24 years—is better by over $4,950.90 than a similar investment for the same time in a savings bank, at 5 per cent. compound interest.

THE WASHINGTON

issues all the most approved forms of life and endowment policies and declares annual dividends on every form of policy, and such dividends may always be used to protect the policy from forfeiture or to reduce the premium at the option of the assured.
